

Alarm Service Company Certification Program

Fast Facts:

Alarm Service Company Certification Program (for Fire and Burglar alarm systems) is the accrediting of alarm service companies to ensure that the installations are being conducted and maintained in accordance with federal, state and local codes, i.e. NFPA 72.

Intertek holds accreditations through ANSI, OSHA, SCC, the California State Fire Marshal and others around the world to test and certify products, facilities, and individuals.

We test, certify and audit to applicable ANSI, UL, ULC and NFPA standards.

The ETL Listed Mark is recognized and legally accepted by AHJ's across North America.

Alarm Service Company Certification Across North America

Intertek has created its own Alarm Service Company Certification Program at the request of industry. For years installers and the insurance industry have been under-served by too few testing and certification options. Intertek is looking to partner with installers and insurance companies to provide the level of certification, service and expertise that is required in such a complex industry.

Why Intertek?

Intertek offers choice, and choice in any market means better service. Our Alarm Service Company Certification Program ensures safety in commercial and residential facilities across North America, and manufacturers and AHJs have trusted Intertek and the ETL Listed Mark for compliance to safety standards for decades.

If you are a distributor or installer, you may feel that your decision-making ability has been compromised by your current Certification provider. In order to maintain your Certification, your installers must also be certified by the same provider. In addition, the electrical equipment used on the premise must also be listed by the same provider. In reality, many quality products such as fire control panels, smoke/CO detectors, back-up power supplies, cables, and other accessory life safety equipment have been tested and certified with an ETL Listed Mark or another NRTL's Mark. They may perform equal to or better than what you're currently using, and they may be more cost-effective.
